New Orieans.—The fears gof trade stagnation which prevailed in the early part of the present month have apparently given place to a more cheerful feeling, as was evidenced by the course of New York slock market yesterday. Another constructive influence was the removal of the ban on trade with the Turkish empire, opening of the Dardanelles to commercial traffic and the granting of the privilege of trading with the Black sea ports. These concessions were, no doubt, largely responsible for the belief that became current that all embargoes, even against enemy countries, would soon be removed.—Times-Picayune.
